Cartridge breach and completion process Totally dry powder dispenser (TDP) cartridges are engineered to provide reliable performance in a wide variety of dispensing environments. After the powder has been loaded, the cartridge is sealed with a plug. This cartridge is then inserted into the dispenser. If the cartridge is compatible with the dispenser, the powder flows through the cartridge's powder flow path by capillary action. The cartridge must first be seated in a cartridge holder in the dispenser. This ensures that the cartridge is securely held in place, and that the cartridge's powder flow path is aligned with the powder outlet in the cartridge holder. The powder flow path through the cartridge is designed to provide reliable flow of powder for the length of time the cartridge is expected to be used for. After the powder has been dispensed, the cartridge is removed. The cartridge can be reloaded with powder or alternatively put back in stock, ready for the next dispensing session. The cartridge is held in place by the cartridge holder. It can be removed by inserting the cartridges into the cartridge holder, and pulling the cartridge out of the cartridge holder. If the cartridge is not compatible with the cartridge holder, the cartridge must be directly loaded into the dispenser.
